DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Falls Road Methodist Church is a frame church five bays in length, its end facing the road to the west; extending from its south side, with east walls flush, is a two-bay educational wing of equal height. A square tower rises from the southwest corner formed by the church and the wing; the principal entrance is in the first storey of the tower and the tower's dimensions reduce above the adjacent church cornice, above which point the walls are covered with diamond-butted wood shingles; a square belfry rises above the shingled walls, topped with a concave pyramidal slated spire. Jig-sawn spandrels between the corner columns and the spire roof beams form a semi-circular arch. All other exterior walls are covered with aluminum siding, recently installed. Gables are said to have been covered with wood shingles, the bottom line of the shingled areas arched to reflect the three pointed-arched Gothic-revival windows below. Side windows of the church are rectangular with sliding sash containing leaded opalescent glass in geometric designs, the principal design being a single pointed-arch lancet within each rectangular opening. Three west end windows of the church and the two south end windows of the educational wing have pointed-arched tops; they, too, are fitted with sliding sash, their wooden muntins describing two lancets.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This rural church building reflects the simplicity of the congregation for which it was erected. The land was originally part of Richard Johns' Black Rock Farm. It was sold to the Trustees of the Society of United Brethren in Christ at Black Rock in 1876 by Shadrach Kemp. The first church was erected in the same year and was so small that it was locally known as the "Pepper Box".

In October, 1885, the congregation became part of the Hereford Circuit of the Methodist Church and remained in the circuit until 1959 at which time it became a station. In June, 1970, Falls Road United Methodist Church joined Salem United Brethren congregation in Hereford and they now share a minister.

The church was rebuilt and enlarged in 1914, owing in part to the generosity of Miss Rebecca Cole who had left $1,000 for that purpose and stipulated that the building should contain a Sunday School room in its basement. A fine memorial window to Miss Cole was placed in the northwest facade where the door had originally been, and other improvements were added.

A cemetery adjoins the church to the north.
